The patient Diary, Immediate and Simple to Use.

The simplest and most reliable e-tool for collecting patient data outside the hospital.

Electronic Clinical Outcome Assessment (eCOA) is a method of capturing data electronically in clinical projects.

It can increase the quality of study data while meeting regulatory requirements.

In the clinical research setting, the use of the electronic diary is an effective solution for collecting data in the patient's home. It electronically registers patient data and automates data entries on, for example, a handheld mobile device, tablet or computer.

At the heart of Techorizon's work is providing value for the customer. We want to quickly deliver an optimal solution that can meet the customer's requirements and needs.

Why Choose TheDiary

New Web Patient eDiary

BYOD configuration possible

Native integration with TheCRF

TheDiary and TheCRF: Everything is under control.

The investigator can monitor the completion of patient diaries directly from TheCRF.

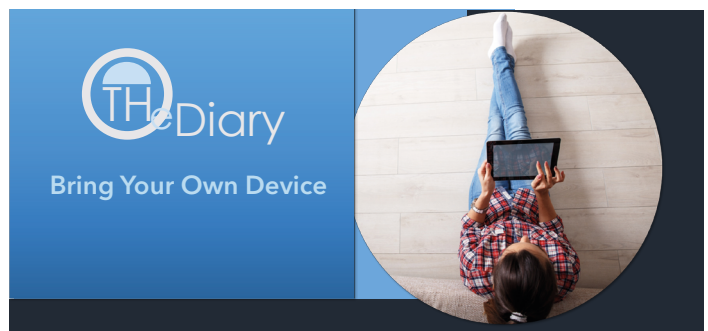

In addition, the investigator can be alerted in cases where the values entered by patients indicate a critical issue for their health. In this way, you can intervene directly to safeguard patient health.

The American BYOD revolution.

The concept of Bring Your Own Device (BYOD), already widespread in the USA, is available as a configuration in TheDiary.

Patients can complete their diary with ease using their own PC or tablet.

The BYOD approach greatly reduces the cost of data collection from patients in their homes.
